

Let $f : \mathbb{R} \rightarrow \mathbb{R}$ be a continuous function. Suppose that for any $c > 0$, the graph of f can be moved to the graph of cf using only a translation or a rotation. Does this imply that $f(x) = ax + b$ for some real numbers a and b ?