Suppose that f and g are real-valued functions on the real line and $f(r) \leq g(r)$ for every rational r. Does this imply that $f(x) \leq g(x)$ for every real x if

a) f and g are non-decreasing?

b) f and g are continuous?